

Chapter 7: Establishing the Rule of Law in Kosovo and Bosnia and Herzegovina: The Contribution of the EU Civilian Missions

Efstathios T. Fakiolas and Nikolaos Tzifakis
abstract

The chapter examines the efforts of the EU civilian missions deployed in BiH (EUPM) and Kosovo (EULEX) to advance the consolidation of state-building and the establishment of the rule of law. It tries to map out and assess their track record, with a view to shed light on successes and deficiencies. It argues that the more focused and well specific the activities taken up by the two missions have been, the more efficient and rewarding have been the results delivered on the ground. Equally important, the two missions have proved able to smoothly work to the benefit of their operational objectives whenever they have both stayed tuned with local interests and streamlined their practices with other EU policies active in the region.

E.T. Fakiolas (*)
Department of Political Science and International Relations, University of the Peloponnese, Corinth, Greece
e-mail: fakiolas@uop.gr
© The Author(s) 2017
Fish, Gill, Petrovic (eds.), A Quarter Century of Post-Communism
Assessed, DOI 10.1007/978-3-319-43437-7_8
187