

|                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
|------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Title:    | Associations between body dissatisfaction, importance of appearance, and aging anxiety with depression, and appearance-related behaviors in women in mid-life                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Year:     | 2019                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Author:   | Isabelle Carrard <sup>1</sup> , Marios Argyrides <sup>2</sup> , Xaris Ioannou <sup>2</sup> , Ingela Lundin Kvaalem <sup>3</sup> , Karin Waldherr <sup>4</sup> , Diana Harcourt <sup>5</sup> , Siobhan McArdle <sup>6</sup>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Abstract: | The impacts of body dissatisfaction have been widely studied among adolescent girls, but much less in women in mid-life. In this study, we evaluated the associations between body dissatisfaction, psychological health and behaviors used to manage age-related changes, in an online survey of 331 women aged 45-65. Body dissatisfaction, importance of appearance and aging anxiety were associated with higher depression scores. Moreover, importance of appearance and aging anxiety were associated with the probability of using "anti-aging" behaviors. It seems that with age, for a subgroup of women, the pressure to stay young may be added to that of staying thin. |